

JULES MUMM CHAMPAGNE

30' TV

"DELIVERY ROOM"

Open on a view of the top of a woman's head. The camera pans up to reveal she's in the throes of labour in a delivery room surrounded by medical staff crowd urging her on.

Suddenly off the back of one of her more vocal pushes, there is the sound of a cork popping. It ricochets off the light and is caught by the doctor.

The woman faints thinking she's given birth to a cork.

Cut to the medical staff looking sternly in one direction. As the woman recovers her head struggles up into frame.

Cut to the culprit, Dad about to take a sip from a glass of champagne. He stops aware that he is under scrutiny and gives them an innocent shrug.

Cut back to the dumbfounded expressions of the medical staff. The woman flicks her eyes skyward then drops down to resume labour.

Cut to the bottle accompanied by the sound of a crying baby. Super: It's never too soon to celebrate with Jules Mumm.

